Description

A matching pair of large framed rare, old driving prints of paintings by Cecil Aldin. We don't have precise dates - but we estimate the paintings to have been done in the early 20th Century. We have reason to believe that these prints were among the first made of these paintings - circa 1930. We do know that the prints have been property of the same family for the last 100 years. Cecil Aldin was an English artist (1870-1935). He trained in Kensington and lived in Chelsea, and was a member of the Chelsea Arts Club. It is possible that these prints are signed by the artist - but we have been unable to prove it.
