Description

A pretty mantle clock from the Edwardian period, (very early 1900s) with attractive inlay in the face. This clock has a ceramic face in good condition and has had the timber re French polished to bring out the colours in the wood. The dome top sits over two side pillars with brass trims top and bottom. A good clock in working order with key, striking on the hour and the half hour. Lovely clock for the money, a great present perhaps?
