Description

It is difficult to correctly describe the quality of the timbers in the leaves of this table. Fabulous comes to mind. It is a rare extending pedestal dining table from the 19th Century. Closed it is 54 inches in diameter and there are 4 additional leaves which are 11 inches each. The table can be used in any combination of leaves. When extending, the superb cabriole leg ends come out from the pedestal to support and the centre remains on the single pedestal. It is just a superb and very rare oval ended pedestal dining table that will ten people when open. It is fully French polished which brings out the excellent graining and the quality of the timbers. It has just come out of our workshops and has yet to be finally finished, There are three pictures that show the table extended with four leaves in place, one picture shows the table with two leaves in place and there are two which show it as a round. There chairs available to suit if required.
