Description

This pair of fine quality brass door handles date from around the late 19th Century - early 20th Century. They are excellent quality and have some fine details on the brass back plates and the finials at the top and bottom of the faceted glass handles. The handles measure 23cm in length using the back plate as measurement; the handles are 22cm including the brass decorative tops and bottom, with the glass handle itself measuring 11cm. The handles are 8cm in depth from the wall, with the support between the backplate and handle being 4.5cm. We decided not to polish the brass because some of our customers prefer us to leave well alone, but they would come up beautifully if given a light polish. They are in excellent condition. Postage and packing within the UK mainland only has been included in the price. For delivery outside the mainland or abroad, please contact us for a quote.
