Description

A lovely pair of elm and ash Windsor side chairs with typically decorated central spat and crinoline stretchers. This pair of chairs are in sturdy condition with a superb colour and patina. There is some historic minor wood worm damage to the back of one chair and the underside seat of the other, this has been treated for peace of mind and does not detract from the beauty of these antiques chairs. Both chairs are stamped with the maker's name 'F. Walker, Rockley'. Rockley was a small hamlet that was constructed around 1822, and was home to a number of small chair makers, the main one of these was William Wheatland. Frederick Walker was one of Wheatlands first employees and eventually took over the business. A wonderful addition to any interior. c.1830 Height: 35" (89cm) Width: 17.5" (44.5cm) Depth of seat: 11.5" (29.5cm) Height of seat: 17.5" (44.5cm)
