Description

A beautiful example of an antique box chest dating from 1900. It is in wonderful condition for its age, with all the original knobs and hinges. It was made by a company called Alfred Graham & Co of London, who were manufacturers of ship telephones; later producers of Amplion. The original carry handles are in very nice condition. It has been professionally waxed polish, so is ready for collection or delivery. It has enough height to be used to sit on if you were thinking of storing shoes in it, then sitting on it to put them on. It would work well in a hallway or as a lamp stand. It could store toys or blankets. A very attractive little box with plenty of history and character! Height 18.5", width 18", depth 13.5"
