Description

A wonderful late 19th Century walnut serpentine fronted Carlton house desk. This extremely attractive Carlton House Desk is especially rare being constructed in walnut. The ornately veneered shaped back having a cross banded edge with a central locking door flanked by Corinthian columns with gilt capitals and shaped drawers to either side. The shaped falls to either end are veneered in a choice cut of walnut having a central lock and opening out to the sides to reveal a further storage compartment. The central writing surface having a tan and gilt tooled leather insert with the whole being able to slide forward for further writing space if required. Below this is a central shaped larger drawer with two smaller drawers to each side all being fully oak lined with original brass drop handles. The whole being raised on shaped cabriole legs with carvings to the knee and gilt shell to the scrolling foot. This Carlton House is of excellent colour and proportions with extremely choice cuts of timber used. In excellent condition having been fully restored using traditional methods this desk which is freestanding, as veneered and polished to the back, will make the talking ...
