Description

A good set of 8 dining chairs made by John Taylors in Edinburgh in the late 1800s. These cabinet made chairs all carrying the impressed stamp are in sound condition, a little pressure marking where they have been up against a table but not serious as can be seen in the pictures. The seats are sound if somewhat worn and the backs have been reupholstered in the none to distant past. This set of chairs must be the keenest price in the world for a quality set like this, in this tidy condition, and of this age. It is also not easy to find good sets of high back chairs in oak, on top of the above we will give the purchaser a 9th chair free of charge to go with the set. Always useful if someone rocks on one and breaks it. They are all in good clean condition with better colour than one might normally expect, they have good deep crisp carving and well turned and reeded leg. All this for only £545
