Description

Rare 18th century oak cased. Scottish clock. By Thomas Pringle St Ninians. Completely original and with now a truly impressive patina. Illustrated in the rare book, Stirling clocks. According to which he only made four clocks. This very rare clock is in near pristine condition, first delivered in a horse and cart, Now 250 years later and just 5 miles away from where it was made, now in our showroom In superb original condition. Working order. The case is profusely carved with a superb Scottish thistle carved upon the base panel. Swan neck pediment with brass bulbous finials. Brass face with silvered dial. Nice slim balanced features. Highly collectable original and very rare Stirling clock. We have found the swan neck pediment central brass finial now, A Osprey, We will update the hood image with the original finial in the next days. We also have a copy of the original book titled Stirling Clocks, with this clock depicted. The provenance of this clock and with 250 odd years of local ownership is testament to its charm and quality. A truly 1 off opportunity to own this superb piece of local history. I've kept it cheap as possible in the hope that it remains in the area of cen...
