Description

A really useful and versatile little early 19th century mahogany table. Standing on square tapering legs the table has one drawer which is strung with ebony and has attractive lions head handles. The 2 leaves can be put up at the side providing more surface when required. It has a false drawer to the reverse side of the table making it a free standing table that does not need to stand against a wall. Both front and back are shown in the photos - they are exactly the same but obviously the one drawer does not open. It is a lovely size being 29" high, 22" wide when the flaps are down and 37" (94cm) when the flaps are raised. It is 20" deep
