Description

We date these to around the late Victorian period to early 20thC and think they were once candle lustres converted many years ago to lamps. We have had them totally rewired by a qualified electrician and put silver plated tops on to secure the chrome lightbulb holders - they are not yellow in colour as appears in the photographs, this is the flash reflecting light. They are shiny, silver plated and in good condition. The lamps measure 25cm up to the base of the lamp holders and the bases are approximately 14cm in diameter. The decorative thumbnails surrounding the base on each, have been rubbed and we suspect this was where the glass lustres touched the glass over the years. The price reflects the wear which is only around this part of the lamps. The price includes postage and packing within the UK mainland only, and for remote parts of the UK or delivery abroad, please contact us for a quote.
