Description

A superb landscape painting probably painted around 1960s./70s Douglas Falconer Oil on Board. Scottish Highland Loch landscape. My particular favorite of several Falconer paintings we presently have in stock. In superb condition. Vibrant colours, superb depth of field, this painting really stands out. As best as we have ever seen from this artist. Size; 15 1/2 x 23 1/2 ins Douglas Falconer initially trained as a furniture designer, gaining several important commissions, including the re-making of the bomb damaged rostrum for the auction house Christie's. Falconer is praised for his romantic and highly atmospheric landscapes. His scenes are mostly of Europe and Britain, and most notably depict the Lake District and the lochs and mountains of Scotland. He originally painted purely as a pastime, but committed himself to it as a result of the level and depth of demand among collectors for his work. Falconer travelled extensively seeking inspiration for his work, and staged numerous highly successful dedicated exhibitions at galleries in London. Some records.
