Description

A fine quality D-end dining table made by the renowned firm of Waring and Gillow. Very well made in solid mahogany in the style of Robert Adam. The table splits into 3 sections and therefore could accommodate varying numbers depending on the table layout, up to a maximum of 8. The two d-end sections are free standing and could be used as a pair of console tables if desired. When fully assembled the table is held in place by brass clips. The table is edged with a crisply carved gadrooned border and there are decorative carved paterae to the tops of the legs. The legs are of elegant tapering form, terminating in spade feet. This table has been repolished within the last few years, it has a great colour and patina and is in excellent overall condition. There are a few very minor scratches which are hardly visible.
