Description

RARE late 18th century Scottish staved wood wassail bowl of super shape, design and colour. Made of two different woods in the stripy pattern that is associated with a lot of smaller Scottish treen items. This is one of the largest turned items I've seen of this stripy pattern, The condition is basically pretty good but as you would expect for an items such as this of this age there are a couple of very minor repairs, a couple of minor hairline cracks and a couple of the joints are slightly loose. The colour is original with great patination with waxed finish. SIZE; 5" diameter, 6" high CIRCA; 1780
