Description

Reginald Jones (British 1857-1920) Wooded Landscape - large watercolour on paper laid to canvas - Signed and Dated 1895 - Currently frame being tidied. Reginald Jones, R.B.A (1857-1920) was an English landscape painter, who predominantly worked in oil, watercolour and pastel. He travelled widely, particularly in France, Spain and Italy, producing many paintings of the landscapes he witnessed. Jones often travelled and worked with artist friends and contemporaries including Terrick Williams and Fred Kahl. After viewing Jones' work at the Royal Institute exhibition of March 1889, the English artist and critic Walter Sickert commented 'I am not sorry for Reginald Jones or Raven Hill. Their accomplished chic can hold its own anywhere. It is not progressive art, though a course of it might be a wholesome tonic to our stippling brigade. During the winter months when opportunities to travel abroad were scarce, Jones gave lessons in water-colour painting at his studio near Hyde Park, London. In 1905 Jones married Jessie Mary Hacon (1860-1951) of Hackney, in High Wycombe. She was the daughter of the late Edward Dennis Hacon (Surgeon & GP) & Clara Turner. Jones was elected a me...
