Description

An attractive and unusual antique 18th Century Dutch oak night table. This pretty bedside table has characteristic Dutch single-fluted legs of the late 18th century and dates from circa 1780-1800. It has a finely slatted sliding tambour front which is in good working order and opens to reveal storage, with a single frieze drawer below, making it a really useful item. It has a lipped top and a wonderful depth of colour to the wood. There is an old split across the top and some old mends to the corners. Would work well as a piece of bedroom furniture but equally as well in a hall or living room as a lamp table. Construction/Wood: Oak Condition Report: Good condition. Nice warm patina the wood. Old splits across the top and at the corners, other marks and wear commensurate with age. Dimensions: Width: 49cm Depth: 35cm Height: 69cm Tambour Front Opening 43cm Wide x 26cm Deep x 25cm High
