Description

This is an antique chest of drawers, a Georgian, English oak piece dating to the early 19th century, circa 1800 featuring a useful, and unusual, double depth bottom drawer. Attractive honey tones to the well figured English oak. Desirable aged patina in the lustre of the wax polished finish. Of quality craftsmanship and in good proportion. Raised on bracket feet all round. The deep top displays well finished with an edge moulding. Side panels in good order and displaying good consistent colour. Smooth sliding, cock beaded drawers arranged '2 over 2'. The bottom drawer double depth with faux double drawer front. Featuring the original iron locks with key absent. Dressed with later solid brass drop handles over 'batwing' back plates. An appealing and useful item of storage furniture. Solid joints and construction, delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
