Description

Regency style twin pillar mahogany dining table with line inlay This Regency style twin pillar mahogany dining table was first made in the first quarter of the 20th c. In this period the cabinetmakers had a wealth of antique timber, that was redundant, that they could then use to make these superb tables. The cabinet maker has chosen the timber well, to construct this twin pillar table. The well figured solid mahogany top, with a double stringing of box and ebony inset around the edge. The table stands on a pair of tripod pillar supports. It has an extra leaf that clips in to extend the table to a good length. Imagine sitting at this and entertaining with your family and friends.
