Description

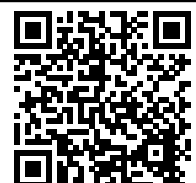

This is an antique clerk's desk, an English, Victorian, mahogany, tall bureau dating to circa 1870. Delightful russet tones to the rich, dark mahogany grain interest and a desirable aged patina. Back in good order - ideal for centre room placement. Raised on square section legs with chamfered inner corners. Single, mahogany lined, dovetailed, frieze drawer dressed with the original, swan neck, brass drop handles. Desk writing slope features a brass lock escutcheon and lock, key absent. High, turned, spindled gallery to the rear in classical form. Of quality craftsmanship with a wax polished finish. Slope lifts easily and rests upon the gallery. Inside a large recess offering voluminous storage. Before a suite of five arched cubby holes with a pair of drawers over. A super example of an antique clerk's writing desk. Solid joints and construction, delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
