Description

Victorian Gothic oak library steps This set of Victorian Gothic oak library steps would have been first made circa 1880. Made for an important library in a large house or institution, that would have been furnished with very fashionable oak panels and bookcases also in the Gothic style. The library steps have 4 treads, and then a square section handle with chamfered edges, finishing then with a lovely turned grip at the top. The base with panels with fretted cut Gothic designs. This is a superb looking item of library furniture, but also being very practical for use. Good library steps are very hard to find and so don't miss the chance of owning these, if you are looking for such a useful item Imagine this is your home, and how you feel as you access your books as you browse through your library UK mainland delivery £75+vat 48.5cms wide (19ins) 80cms Top of treads (31 1/2ins) 65cms deep (25 1/2ins) 175cms top of handle (66ins)
