Description

French oil on canvas signed by the artist Fernand Lantoiné and dated 1909. The painting shows a view of the Rochers des Frenes . It is mounted in a simple wooden frame. Fernand Lantoiné (Marez , 1876-1955) was a French painter and draftsman but often associated with the Belgian School. He was the son of doctor, Fernand Désiré Louis Lantoiné and was born in Marez , France. At the age of fifteen, he moved with his family to Uccle , near Brussels , where he lived for fifty years. Between 1894 and 1897, he performed his military service in the 4th Marine Infantry Regiment, in Brest 3 . This contact with the sea stimulates its nascent taste for distant horizons. He then studied at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, in Paris, where he met Paul Signac, whose neo-impressionism was to mark his later work. He joined the avant-garde group - Le Sillon - where he took his first steps as an artist. As he got closer to the members of the Brussels avant-garde group of the Libre Esthétique, he exhibited at their salon and at the triennial exhibition of Fine Arts. At that time, he traveled on the Côte d'Azur and the Balearic Islands. It is, it is said, in these islands that he had the re...
