Description

Large unframed oil on canvas showing a shepherd driving his sheep up a track. The painting is signed Mathys for Henry Schouten. The canvas has been lightly cleaned and re-varnished and is in good condition. Henry Schouten (also known as Henri Schouten) (Indonesia, ca. 1857 - Brussels, 1927) was a Belgian painter who is best known as an animal and landscape painter. He used several pseudonyms during his career as a painter. He received his education at the Academy of Brussels (1876-1881) and had a strong influence from the animal painter Alfred Verwee. Schouten was first and foremost a smooth, realistic animal painter: cows, sheep, horses, chicken races and animals on the court. But he also painted farmers and herders in their area, a hunter with dogs, a drinking horse seller or a milk farmer with dog cart. He also painted a number of still lifes with flowers or poultry and fruit or a still life with fish and shrimps. He exhibited in Brussels from 1882 with the Union des Arts. During his career he used various artist names: Jos Klaus, M. CLaes, Joseph Klaas, E. Meulat Joors, V. Marinus, Mathys and J. Remis. At the auctions his works achieve decent amounts varying from ...
