Description

FINE quality early 19th century brass inlaid flame mahogany console table with original marble top. The best of quality veneers used throughout which are mirrored together producing a lovely grain pattern. All flat surfaces are inlaid with a brass line plus the front scrolls. The table stands on plain rectangular legs to the back and lion paw feet to the front. The front freize has been made into a drawer in Edwardian times but has been well done. The marble requires a small repair to one of the corners which is included in the price. The piece is continental almost definitely Dutch.
