Description

Shown is a fine example of the 'Pendule Portative' or portable clock as it has a silk suspension which is very forgiving when the clock is carried. This beautiful example has a superb 'watersilk' engine turned dial which was quite popular in the 1830-50's and quite possibly the best set of hands we have ever seen on such a clock being elaborately made and gilded. The dial has a rating square above the 12 o'clock position and a small cartouche below the six with Henry Marc's Name and Paris. The case is mostly Rosewood with fancy inlays to both sides and line inlays to the outer edges. Bell striking on the hour and half hour and being a 'countwheel' strike you can run this clock Silently too. A very good Henry Marc, clock. Circa 1840-50.

Internal Ref: Silvered dial Henry Marc
