Description

This 19th Century work table has a lovely grain in the mahogany. It really is a most attractive example. The top has the serpentine shape to each edge and the shaped and detailed base is most elegant with the cabriole shape to the feet and the serpentine stretcher with the carved centre. It has a useful little drawer and the basket below that for those slightly larger items. Can of course be used for any purpose ever its original one for storage of the sewing items. It is in great condition and as stated above has good graining in the timber. A bit special this one.
