The work is in very nice condition and very tightly painted with lots of detail. Painted in 1821 and with important original London dealer labels verso. Within it exhibition frame. Title: "Rural life" Signature: Signed lower centre & dated 1821 - signature slightly rubbed Provenance: H & P De Casseres, Duke St London - original 1917 label verso Medium: Oil on fine panel Size: 17" by 21" Painting 28" by 32" framed Condition: Very good condition for age. Patrick Nasmyth was the son and pupil of Alexander Nasmyth. He was harshly treated by life as a young man. A serious injury to his right hand forced him to work almost exclusively with his left hand, and he also went deaf. These misfortunes may have made him all the more attached to his art, and he lost all interest in any studies not connected with it. At the age of twenty, he went to London, where his talent quickly won him fame. He was nicknamed the 'English Hobema'. He exhibited for the first time at the Royal Academy and was one of the founders of the Society of Britis...
