Description

This is an antique library table, Victorian Gothic revival. Scottish oak with carved decoration, this side table dates to the late 19th century, circa 1880. A handsome library table displaying good colour and grain interest. Profusely carved throughout with typical Victorian excess. In good proportion with a desirable aged patina. The top displays well with wisps of medullary rays and a decorative edge moulding. The shaped frieze offering a disguised drawer to one side. Each corner guarded by magnificent lion head masks. Inverted umbral and ball finials beneath scrolled brackets. Raised on stout turned pillars over carved, scrolled legs and feet. Well executed, bulbous carvings to the upper leg. The legs united by a robust, carved stretcher. A magnificent antique library table presented with solid joints and construction. Delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
