Description

This is an exceptional piece of jewellery dating from the 1940's set in 18ct White Gold is a central Morganite stone, this stone is stunning to the naked eye, it has a pink hue which enhances its ethereal quality. The stone as been superbly faceted, at times the stone can seem to be pink, but due to the way the stone was faceted means with any slight movement of the hand, colours can turn from pink to salmon to nearly orange. To add to the excellent quality of this ring is 1ct of Diamonds, the ring as Diamonds surrounding the central 15ct Morganite stone, as well as Diamonds flanking the ring's shoulders; however what sets this ring's quality apart are the two Diamonds on the underbezzle of ring. One facing the wearer and the other away facing 180 degrees of the wearer. The ring hallmarked 18ct White Gold and weighs an impressive 11.2 grams and is a size N. This is a stunning statement piece, whether being purchased to add to a collection of rings, or whether being brought as a non conventional engagement ring it is superb ring at a great price.
