Description

A large mahogany framed Cheval mirror dating from the early 1900s. It has an attractive arched top with delicate turned urn finials on the supports and it is set on curved legs. The mirror swings and can be adjusted and then tightened into place using the small brass handles either side of the supports. It has its original mirror plate with some minor spots of wear and foxing but nothing major. It is in good condition for its age and is strong and sturdy. There are no major damages and it displays well. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions please ask.
