Description

This Edwardian oak and brass club fender was made circa 1910. It is of a rare style as the base kerb is of figured grain oak, not the usual brass. We have upholstered the end seats with our fine hand dyed and antique finished buttoned leather. The seats are supported by brass tube column supports and with the brass bow shaped centre. Club fenders are a fantastic piece of furniture that can be used for informal get togethers as you sit by the fire. Imagine this set in place at one of your fireplaces, it will get many comments of approval as you enjoy the warmth of the fire as you relax and socialise.
