Description

Victorian oak desk chair This Victorian oak desk chair was made circa 1890. This desk chair has a good long saddle seat and with a leather buttoned arm and back rest. The legs are joined by turned and crinoline shaped stretchers, this makes the chair very strong. At the bottom of the legs are castors. I attribute this chair to be by Bros who were a company based in Bristol, they used the Greek key design on their pieces, often centre and occasional tables.
