Description

A large pair of late 19th century Chinese brush pots made from bamboo. They are deeply carved with panels depicting Chinese figures and pagodas among a wooded landscape. Although showing age related shrinkage cracks, they are in good condition with a rich colour and patina. Brush pots are containers for holding the brushes used by scribes for Chinese calligraphy. The brushes would be rinsed and stored in the pots with their handles down so that the bundles of hair would keep their shape and point.
