Description

This mahogany bookcase from around 1900 or maybe a tiny touch later is in lovely tidy condition. The finish is pretty much original, we just given it a clean and rewaxing before buffing to bring out the superb colour and graining. This has clearly been well looked after over the last 100 years and has not suffered and serious light fade. This is a most unusual example with the most useful little drawers just under the top, these boast the original nouveau handles, and the cupboard below that has an astrigal glazed door that has a bevel all round each piece of glass. Inside the cupboard is a shaped shelf that gives a taller space, perfect for the after dinner port or brandy perhaps, with the glasses handy on the upper shelf. The sides have adjustable shelves that can go up or down to suit your own requirements. These shelves are a good depth at 25cms. This is just exceeding good quality and could fit into most homes, a rather rare item at a very modest price for its quality and condition. sizes given below are outside of the body, the small back is an additional 14cms high.
