Description

This exceptional quality Early 19thC Mahogany Pedestal Desk is not only a magnificent piece of cabinet making but also incredibly useful too. The finely figured Mahogany veneers are a delight to the eye and have been restored to a glorious warm glow. All 9 drawers are of great depth, as expected of a desk of this quality, beautifully made with good timber, and offer lots of storage. The pedestals drawers can be locked with the locking side bars, similar to a Wellington Chest, with their Bramah locks. The outside top drawers have secondary locking with supplementary locks. The middle drawer has a Bramah lock as well. Obviously, this desk was made to keep very valuable documents safe. The rear is finished with a full compliment of faux drawers, meaning that this desk looks good from any angle and can be displayed in the centre of a room. Many of these features shown on this desk, locking side bars, central wooden knob to the drawers and moulded paneled sides are reminiscent of Gillows pieces, and although there is no sign of any makers stamp is of similar quality to those pieces made by the renowned maker. The decoratively tooled, distressed full hide in a faded green ...
