Description

A rare set of 12 wall mounted Holophane lights dating from the early 20th Century (priced individually and for sale on their own or in multiples). The traditional prismatic glass pendant light is stamped 'Holophane' 'England' and has its original metal gallery also stamped 'Holophane'. The hook on the top of the gallery hooks onto a copper arm bracket with square back plate to fix it to a wall. The lights have been rewired with modern bayonet bulb holders and are ready to install but we recommend the lights are checked and wired by a professional electrician. The lights are all in good condition with no major damages. There are a few small nicks and nibbles to the glass here and there but nothing detrimental. The metal arm and gallery have tarnished over time to produce a wonderful aged patina. We have only lightly cleaned them to preserve this patina but they could be polished up if desired. Approximate Measurements: Base Diameter of Shade : 8" (20cm) Length of Arm Bracket : 10" (25cm) Total Height including the drop : 12" (30cm) The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions please ask.
