Description

A good 19th Century farmhouse dining table with two drawers, set on thick turned legs. The drawers have black painted knobs and are generally clean and tidy inside and open well having had the runners repaired and replaced. It has a four plank top with bread board ends and plenty of signs of age and use. There are various marks, knife cuts and old worm holes that come together to create a wonderful worn patina. It is very practical and a good height to sit at with ample leg clearance of 24 1/2" all the way around. The table has good wide proportions, making it plenty big enough to seat 6 comfortably and allow for room down the middle of the table for serving dishes. Overall it is in good condition and is a strong and sturdy table. It has been cleaned and is ready for use.
