Description

Lovely Georgian Scottish "Country House" cutlery box of large size in solid satin birch. Satin Birch was a wood used in Scotland a lot for furniture making as it was a home grown timber with fairly straight grain. This cutlery tray / box is steep sided with a fancy shape central division. It is of dovetailed construction with multiple small dovetails in the corners. The piece is a lovely colour with great original patination and waxed finish. There are a few old small cracks and shakes as it has been well used and I think the bottom might be an old (19th century) replacement. PRICE INCLUDES UK POSTAGE AND PACKING SIZE; 16" by 13" by 6" high, 8 1/2" high in the centre CIRCA; 1780 - 1800
