Description

The overall proportions of this clock are perfect, the balance of the convex enamel dial and the simple yet elegant hands, the superb 'mellowed' mahogany case and the tuned bell strike for the hours sounding through silk backed sound frets in the sides of the hood. The high quality original movement has a 'recoil' escapement and of 8 day duration. The design is classic Regency and can be displayed with or without the brass finial to the hood. Dwerrihouse and Carter of Berkeley Square, London would have made this clock around 1810. If you are looking to invest in one clock, this is it. A very good choice. Please come and view this clock as the pictures do not represent it very well.
