Description

A lovely small 17th century gateleg table constructed from oak, pine and fruit wood. The table has a fantastic dark patina with rich highlights of colour coming from the fruit wood timbers in the base. One of the gates has been replaced probably in the early 19th century, this historical restoration is constructed from pine and has developed a very nice patina. In the center of the table is an oak drawer with a finely turned knob. The table has had some splitting to the top planks and some wood worm damage in the past but is structurally sound. This table will seat four people and is the perfect size for a small cottage or apartment.
