Description

Lovely example of an early 20th Century oak filing cabinet consisting of four large drawers, each with a brass cup handle and brass label holder. The drawers are a traditional design with movable file dividers to hold the files up. These can be pushed to the back of the drawers to enable the whole length to be used. It is in very good usable condition. The drawers slide open smoothly and are generally clean and tidy. The top of one of the file dividers is broken but is still usable. The wood has a wonderful rich patina and although it is not without some small marks and knocks and signs of age and use there is nothing detrimental and it displays beautifully.
