Description

The Regency 'longcase' or Grandfather clock with round convex dial. This particular example is made by the clock maker Christie of Chancery Lane, London. The convex dial is signed by the makers and has very elegant Regency hands. The clock is wound once a week and strikes the hours on a bell. The very 'figured' flame mahogany case is perfectly proportioned and retains the original double plinth to the base, canted. This example has trunk door with a glass central panel which may have been a Victorian modification, it's comforting to see the pendulum swing and the weights slowly descending. The Victorian's and Edwardian's. Please come and view this clock in our shop showrooms. Sold with a two year guarantee and delivery within 100miles of our shop. Please note the height is measured to the tip of the removeable finial.
