Description

Edwardian mahogany extending dining table This Edwardian mahogany extending dining table was made circa 1900, we attribute this to made in the workshops of Waring & Gillow. The quality of the timber and construction would only have been made in one of the most superior workshops in the day. The table when closed is circular and winds out using a handle on a highly engineered patent telescopic mechanism. The dining table comes with 3 leaves that can be inserted to suit your dining requirements. You may use any combination of leaves. This makes this a very versatile dining table. There are legs to each corner, each being a solid mahogany square tapering shape with acanthus leaf carving at the top of the leg and finishing with the original castors under. This table for dining will bring you much pleasure as you entertain with your family and friends. 237cms when fully extended 93 1/4ins 123cms closed without leaves 43 1/4ins 74cms high 29ins 61cms high floor to skirt 24ins 121cms wide 47 3/4ins Leaf 1 39.5cms 15 1/2ins Leaf 2 37cms 14 1/2ins Leaf 3 37cms 14 1/2ins Whilst we take great care measuring the sizes may not be exact.
