Description

Attractive antique Victorian rosewood tapestry fire screen. A lovely antique Victorian rosewood fire screen. We date this screen to the late 19th century. The screen consists of a central tapestry showing a foliate display within a large vase. The front of the screen is lined in glass. The screen is raised on four splayed legs and has a turned stretcher for support. The legs have carved flowers and scroll feet. The screen is 41" (104cm) high by 25" (64cm) wide by 18" (46cm) deep. This lovely antique screen remains in very good solid condition with only very minor surface markings commensurate with age and usage. This includes some minor indentations around the base. This remains a stylish and elegant antique screen which will continue to provide good service for many years to come.
