Description

A magnificent and very unusual near pair of antique Victorian oak chairs made from the timber of a beer cask (see label underneath). The elaborate scroll-carved and ropetwist-moulded splats within scrolling uprights over drop-in seats with corbel-incised rails on moulded cabriole legs and brass castors. The casters are stamped "cope" and the seats are in their original faded red velvet upholstery. Both chairs are very delicate and not suitable for sitting on – purely decorative only. Dating from circa 1880. Construction/Wood: Oak Condition Report: Both chairs are very delicate and not suitable for sitting on – purely decorative only. There are lots of old mends to the delicate backs of both chairs.
