Description

Edwardian inlaid curio table This Edwardian inlaid curio table was made circa 1910. These cabinets were originally purchased to set in the drawing room to display the owners most precious small objects that had been found on their travels around the Empire and on the Grand Tour. The cabinet stands on finely turned legs all with line inlay, to each corner that are joined by a solid platform. A glazed lid lifts on a high-quality hinge to allow you organise and set your items in place. The lid is banded in wonderful kingwood with turret corners with specimen mahogany roundels inside box and kingwood borders. Imagine how this fine cabinet made in the 'Age of elegance' will look in your home. Not only does this look stunning but it is also very practical as you can display your precious items inside. 61cms wide 24ins 41cms deep 16ins 71cms high 28ins All measurements are approximate This Edwardian inlaid curio table is a finite item that is a very green product which has not affected the environment we live in.
