Description

A charming Victorian pine side table with single drawer dating from the late 19th Century. It stands on pretty turned tapering legs and has its original 'faux mahogany' grained red painted finish. It is in good original condition and displays well. There are signs of historic woodworm which have all been treated as a precaution. There are general signs of age and use, some surface marks, a small chip on the drawer front and some knocks around the legs but nothing detrimental. The table has been cleaned and given a light wax and is ready for use. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions please ask.
