Description

A fine 18th century mahogany BRACKET CLOCK of compact size and in good original condition. The case is typically George III, with its "bell" top; set of four cast brass "pineapple" finials and cast carrying handle. To the sides are twin silk-backed ormolu panels cast with cherubs whilst the front door features similar ormolu spandrels. The 8-day movement, with its engraved backplate retains its original verge escapement striking and repeating hours on a bell, whilst the good dial has Strike/Silent control in the arch and a third gilded hand, to automatically show the date. This date is engraved to the inside of the silvered chapter-ring. Signed: John Taylor to the cartouche below "XIII" 1784. 18ins high. John Taylor worked at 41, Upper Moorfields, London from 1784 until 1788
