Description

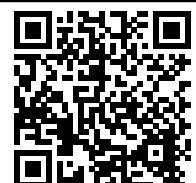

This is an antique countertop display cabinet. An English, Victorian oak and glass showcase, dating to the late 19th century, circa 1900. Generous size cabinet displays a desirable aged patina. Select cuts of oak display fine grain interest. Good consistent colour throughout in rich caramel hues. Original glass plate affords bright, showcase quality. Light marks to glass under close inspection - commensurate with age. A pair of large, upward opening cabinet doors. Each dressed with brass lock escutcheons, key present and in working order. Stout wooden spar delineates each side of the showcase. Mirrored base reflects ambient light, aiding display brightness. This is a fascinating counter top display, ideal for merchandising or small collectibles. Solid joints and construction, delivered waxed, polished and ready for display.
