Description

Dating to the turn of the century, around 1900 this late Victorian or early Edwardian calendar is a most unusual shape and a real statement piece. This hexagonal giant measures 15" in diameter and is of course for wall hanging with the brass hook still present on the back. There are a series of rods at the back used for moving forward the day, date and month forward and then reversing at the beginning or the new month. The front is glazed to protect the fabric underneath. A wonderful addition to any wall at home or at the office. Excellent condition.
