Description

An elegant 18th century "Plum Pudding" Mahogany drop leaf table. The Mahogany timbers that make up the three leaves of the top are of the highest quality, having superb burr figuring in the grain. The base of the table is simple yet refined, having straight legs terminating into a pad foot and two of the legs pivot by their wooden hinges that support the leaves. The table has had some old wood worm damage to the base of the table at some stage, commiserate with age. This is a really lovely table with superb colour and patination and a very nice size. Length of the table with the leaves up 118cm and with the leaves down 40.5cm.
